INTRODUCTION

The English Opening (1. c4) derives its name from the Englishman Howard Staunton, who adopted it six times against the Frenchman, Pierre St. Amant, in their 1843 match (two wins, two draws, and two losses). The English Opening has become the third most popular opening move for White after 1. e4 and 1. d4.

This particular collection of chess games deals with the shorter games arising from the English Opening. There are over five hundred interesting and instructive games decided in 25 moves or less. These games illustrate how masters and amateurs use their skills or take advantage of their opponent's mistakes to produce a miniature game.

The openings are arranged according to the Encyclopedia of Chess Openings (ECO) classification system (see ECO Opening Key). There are a few light annotations to some of the games to assist the reader in alternative ideas or explain why resignation was called for. Sixty diagrams appear for some games where interesting positions have arisen. An index of players appear in the back of the book.

If you have any interesting short games that you would like to see in a future miniature collection, please send them to the publisher, Chess Enterprises, 107 Crosstree Road, Coraopolis, PA 15108. Next in the series of miniature games will be those arising from the Caro Kann opening.

Author Wall presents another is his popular series of miniature games - games completed in 25 moves or less - this time in the English Opening. His compilation includes games involving Grandmasters as well as woodpushers. These collections have proven to be valuable to players who wish to see typical mistakes and how they are punished. But many readers simply find these games very entertaining. Quick victories have always been popular for light reading - the thrust of a quick mating attack or win has a certain attraction. Bill Wall adds light notes to illustrate better lines, or the continuation when an early resignation leaves it not too obvious how material will be lost or mate will follow.
